

Overheated summer daze

“...and the stock market has its best week since July...Take that, Karl Marx”. From the film “Uncle Buck” 1989. What a scorcher! And the weathers not too bad either. Murray is champion, Froome is victorious and the cricket is all sewn up. For those yet to depart on holiday, the stock markets aren't looking too shabby either.

What a scorcher! And the weathers not too bad either. Murray is champion, Froome is victorious and the cricket is all sewn up. For those yet to depart on holiday, the stock markets aren't looking too shabby either. The FTSE100 Index has recovered to a respectable 6,525 and the S&P500 index is at all time record high. Even the bond markets are behaving themselves, with US yields approaching 2-year highs and Gilt yields sitting in a Goldilocks range around 2.35% and new Bank of England Governor, Mark Carney, telling us what we want to hear. What's not to like?

Whilst it has all gone our way this year, the performance of equities in particular has pushed portfolio weightings to limits that do require some attention in terms of risk management and we have the luxury of being in a position to take significant profits and still remain mildly overweight, reflecting our longer term positive view. Cazenove UK Opportunities Fund led the charge in most TAM client portfolios in addition to being the highest weighted investment. In fact, the fund performance was virtually neck and neck with a relatively new addition PFS Chelverton UK Equity Income which is a specialist stock picking fund in small and mid-sized companies. And if that wasn't enough, we were delighted to see the fund managers of both funds, Julie Dean from Cazenove and David Taylor and David Horner from Chelverton, scooping the top prize in their categories at the Investment Week Fund Manager of the Year Awards 2013.

As we highlighted in our recent note "Patience and conviction pays off" the positive view on equities, and overweight position, has delivered good performance over the last 15-18 months, and key to being in the rather optimal position we find ourselves in has been the conviction to keep our nerve during the periodic shake-outs and add further to positions on subsequent weakness.

However, as the summer heat wave runs on into the holiday season, we are wary of a few storm clouds brewing on the horizon. The extent to which the eurozone debate has shut down would be comic if weren't so serious. The sacrosanct Euro holiday is one factor, of that we are sure; the other is the determination not to upset the desired election victory for Germany's Angela Merkel. After that, the notion of German taxpayers digging deep into their pockets for their Mediterranean eurozone siblings may be too unpalatable to bear. Will the IMF demand the ECB stumps up more? Will Berlusconi's upheld jail sentence fracture the Enrico Letta-led Italian coalition – perhaps leading to another election and opening the door to the Eurosceptic 5-Star movement? Nobody knows.

So TAM has decided to bank the profits now while the stock market charts are pushing technical highs. This move will only bring client portfolios back into line with benchmarks. It does not alter our thoughts on bonds or equities in the longer term but we believe this is a prudent move which may afford clients the chance to sit back and enjoy this hazy summer in a daze of relative contentment.

This document is not intended in isolation as an offer or solicitation or recommendation to use or invest in any of the services or products mentioned herein. Investors should be aware that the value of the portfolio and the income from it can go down as well as up so you may get back less than you invested. Past performance is not necessarily a guide to future returns. The value of investments denominated in foreign currency may fall as a result of exchange rate movements. The investments and services referred to in this document may not be suitable for all investors and, if in doubt, you should seek qualified independent financial advice. Any opinions, expectations and projections within this note are those of TAM Asset Management International Limited, represent only one possible outcome and do not constitute investment advice.

TAM Asset Management International Limited is regulated by the Financial Services Commission of Mauritius and is an authorised Financial Services Provider regulated by the South African Financial Service Conduct Authority.